

10 problems facing Livestock Development ...

- 1 There is a gap between household analysis and models of the higher-level economy
- 2 Livestock analysis has too much focus on productivity and not enough on profitability and incomes
- 3 No-one knows what the returns to a (government) investment in livestock are
- 4 Policymakers are less informed about livestock than about crops
- 5 All stages of the policy cycle are poorly informed about livestock
- 6 Livestock's market linkages and producer organisations lack commitment and sustainability
- 7 Available credit is not suited to livestock producers
- 8 Livestock data and information are unsuited to its uses by public and private sector
- 9 There is too little consideration given to livestock/environment interactions
- 10 Training and education is lacking for livestock producers